

The Psychology of Color in Marketing

How colours influence consumer behaviour

Jyothi Malavika · AMB2096

Why Color Matters

Imagine a store painted entirely in grey — no emotion, no energy. Now imagine bold reds, calming blues, luxurious blacks. Colors shape decisions before a word is spoken.

The Core Question

How do colors influence perception, emotion, and purchase decisions?

The Gap

Which colors actually drive sales — and are those effects universal or cultural?

The Risk

Without clarity, brands waste investment on ineffective visual strategies.

Research Methodology

"We didn't just ask people what they like — we observed what they feel and do."

Quantitative

Surveys on consumer colour preferences across 200+ participants

Qualitative

Behavioural observation and brand case studies

Tools

Visual stimuli (ads with varied colour schemes), emotion tracking, purchase intent scoring

What the Data Captured

Think of colours as musical notes — each triggers a different emotional rhythm in the consumer's mind.

Demographics

Age, gender, cultural background

Emotion Scores

Calm, excitement, trust

Behaviour

Brand recall & purchase intention

The Framework: Stimulus → Response

"A customer doesn't buy a product — they buy a feeling. Color is the first storyteller."

Color
Stimulus

Emotional
Response

Perception
Shift

Purchase
Decision

Red

Urgency, passion, impulse

Green

Health, nature, calm

Blue

Trust, security, reliability

Black

Luxury, sophistication, power

Key Results

85%

Cite color

as a primary reason for purchase

80%

Brand recognition

boost from consistent color use

● Warm Colors

Red & orange → impulse buying, urgency

● Cool Colors

Blue & green → trust, long-term loyalty

□ Color acts like a silent salesperson — guiding decisions without saying a word.

Conclusion

What We Learned

- Color significantly influences consumer psychology at every touchpoint
- No "one-size-fits-all" — cultural and contextual factors always apply
- Align color with brand personality, test with data, and know your audience

"In marketing, color isn't decoration — it's persuasion."

Let's Discuss

Decode the colors you encounter every day.

Reflect

How do colors influence your own buying decisions?

Connect

Which brand do you most strongly associate with a single color — and why?

Challenge

Can color strategy overcome a weak product? Where does it fall short?

Jyothi Malavika · AMB2096

